	Day 05: Declaration of Independence-Introduction
ay 01: Causes of War	Class Notes:
ay 02: Recruiting Troops	You probably already know that The Declaration of Independence was an important document in American history. The founding fathers wrote it to declare independence from England and to show they were willing to fight for it. With ay 03: Shot Heard Around	this document, the signers showed England that they were unified in their beliefs about government. The drafting of the Declaration did not start the American Revolution, but it made it official. After the colonial leaders published these ay 04: Ticondoroga and B	ideas out to the world, they could never turn back.
ay 05: Declaration o	There are other reasons why the Declaration is so important in our collective history. Of course, its original purpose was to declare independence, but it contains other original and innovative ideas as well. The Declaration explains why the new American society will be different than anything that came before it, it shows what the mindset of the American ay 06: Preamble	people was at the time and what it would become as the states formed their identities. The ideas described were crucial to the formation of the American heritage. In fact, they affect how Americans think and how the American ay 07: Beliefs	government operates today.
ay 08: Grievances	Even though the Declaration was the "first of its kind," it was like most historical "firsts." The ideas in it were a logical reaction to beliefs and events of the past. The changes described in the Declaration did not juet come out of nowhere, they developed over a long period of time — at least a contury before the Declaration was written. The many events
ay 09: Signatures	that led up to the drafting of the Declaration included conflicts over a variety of political, economic, philosophical, religious and social issues. By the time the Revolution began, these issues had affected the colonists so much that they knew they had to take action to gain control of their government.
ay 10: Presentations-Dec
ources	The development of the Declaration of Independence was a natural next step in the development of an American way of thinking. Even though it built upon activities and ideas already in place, it was an extraordinary event.
